THE RUNAWAY MATCH.

A great many years since, when bright eyed and fair haired lasser were not so plenty as they are now, there dwelt in the town of P_____, a pretty village distant some twenty miles from ne market town, a peculiar, ugly, cross grained but wealthy farmer.

Minnie was Danforth's only child, and report said truly that she would be his sole legates.

The old man was a sturdy farmer, and estimated to be worth full ten thousand; at that period a very handsome fortune, to be sure.

The sparkling eyes and winning manner of Minnie Danforth had stirred up the finer feelings of the whole male portion of the village, and her suitors were numerous, but her father was peculiar, and none succeeded in making headway with him or his daughter.

In the meantime Minnie had a true and loyal lover in secret. Who would have supposed for one moment that such a fellow dared to look on beauty and comparative refinement?

His name was Walker, or, as he was generally called, Joe Walker, and was simply a farmer employed by old Danforth, who had entrusted Joe with the management of the place two or three years.

But a very good farmer and an excellent manager was this same Joe Walker. He was young too, only twenty-three, and he dared to fall in love with the betutiful, pleasant, joyous Minnie Danforth. But the strangest part of the ecourrence was that Minnie returned his picions. Very soon afterward Joe learned the old man's mind in regard to his future disposal of Minnie's hand; he quickly saw his case was a hopeless one unless he reserted to stratagem, so he set his wits at eace to work. By agreement, an apparently settled dislike and coldness was observed by the lovers toward each other for five or six months, and the father saw, as he pelieved with satisfaction, that his previous believed with satisfaction, that his previous fears had been premature. Then by agreement also between them, Joe absented himself from home at evening, and aight after night, for fall three meanths long, did Joe disappear as soon as his work was finished, to return home only at late bed time. This was unusual, and old Danforth determined to know the cause

Joe frankly confessed that he was in love with a man's daughter, who resided less than three miles distant, but after a faishful attachment between them for several months the old man had utterly refused his application for the young girl's hand.

This satisfied him that he had made a mis This satisfied him that he had made a mistake in regard to his own daughter, Minnie, and he would help Joe to get married, and thus stop all further trouble or suspicion at home.

"Do you like her?"

"Yes, sir—yes."

"Then marry her."

"But I can't—her father objects."

"Poh! let him do so; what need you care?
Run away with her."

"Elope!"

"Yes—off with you at once. If the gal will join, all right; marry her, bring her here—you may have the cottage at the foot of the lane; I'll furnish it for you; your wages shall be increased, and the old man may like it or not."

"But no buts, Joe. Do as I bid you; go about it at once, and—"
"You'll stand by me?"
"Yes, to the last. I know, Joe, you're a good fellow, and a good workman, and will make anybody a good son or a good husband."
"The cli fellow will be so plaguey mad, though."

"The old fellow with be so plaguey mad, though."

"Who cares 7 go now, quickly."

"To-morrow night, then."

"Yes."

"I'll hire Clover's horse."

"No, you shan't."

"No ?"

"I say no. Take my horse—the best one—young Morgan—he'll take you in fine style in the new photon."

"The old man will be very much aston "Never mind; go on. We'll turn the laugh on him. I'll take care of you and your wife."

"I'll do it." "You shall," and they parted in good

An hour after dark on the following evening An hour after dark on the following evening, Joe made his appearance dressed in a nice new black suit, and really looked very comely. The old man bustled out to the barn with him, helping him to harness Morgan to the new photon. A few rods distint from the house he found Mionic, as by previous arrangement, and repairing to the next village, the parson very quickly made them one in the bonds of hely wedlock. Joe took bis bride, and soon dashed back to the town of P———, and halted at old Danforth's house, who was really looking for him with open arms.

"Is it done? cried the old gentleman.

"Yes," answered Jon.

"Bring her in," continued the old fellow in high glee; "never mind compliments here;" and the old man rushed for lights, returning immediately. "Yes, yes..."
"And this is my wife," he added, as he passup his beautful bride—the newstening and lovely

He gave in reluctantly, and the fair Minnie Danforth was overjayed to be acknowledged as Mrs. Joe Walker.

The marriage proved a joyous one, and the original assection of Danforth is true in every respect. The canning lover was a good son and a faithful husband, and lived many years to enjoy the happiness which followed upon his runaway match, while the old man has never cared to near much about the details of an elopement, for he saw how completely he had overshot the mark.

Considerable excitement was created in Nor-folk to-day by a negro celebration. Contra-bands collected together with their marshals, formed a procession of at least four thousand negroes of all kinds and colors, headed by a band of music, drums and fifes, and paraded through the principal streets of the city. They carried several Union flags, and cheered foully for the downfall of African slavery. It was understood that they were celebrating the day of the emancipation proclamation.
